camera lucida

chamber music concerts at UC San Diego
sponsored by the Sam B. Ersan Chamber Music Fund
monday june 1, 2009
Pierrot Lunaire, Op. 21 (1912)
Three Times Seven Poems by Albert Giraud

Mondstrunken  Nach (Passacaglia)  Heimweh
Colombine    Gebet an Pierrot  Gemeinheit
Der Dandy    Raub                Parodie
Eine blasse Wäscherin  Rote Messe  Der Mondfleck
Valse de Chopin  Galgenlied  Serenade
Madonna      Enthauptung         Heimfahrt (Barcarole)
Der kranke Mond  Die Kreuze       O alter Duft

Intermission

Quintet for Strings in C major, Op. 163/D 956 (1828)
Franz Schubert
(1797-1828)

I. Allegro ma non troppo
II. Adagio
III. Scherzo: Presto - Trio: Andante sostenuto
IV. Allegretto

Susan Narucki, soprano
Demarre McGill, flute
Anthony Burr, clarinet
Jeff Thayer, violin/viola
Alexander Palamidis, violin
Che-yen Chen, viola
Charles Curtis, cello
Yao Zhao, cello
Giraud’s Symbolist poems, published in 1884, are hardly avant-garde productions, but emerge out of late 19th-century aestheticism and symbolism. His subject, the moon-struck Pierrot, is taken from 16th-century commedia dell’arte theater, which enjoyed a considerable revival among modernists. For Baudelaire, Laforgue, Verlaine, Stravinsky, Picasso and others, Pierrot embodies the suffering poet-lover whose clown costume (black skullcap, white floppy pants and jacket, and pale makeup) contrasts with his melancholic demeanor. Unlike the acrobatic, clownish Harlequin, Pierrot is a solitary soul, detached from the fast-paced, metropolitan world. Pagliacci is the type, Charlie Chaplin his filmic version. One hint as to why this 16th-century figure became such an icon of early modernism can be gleaned from the third poem, “Der Dandy,” in which Pierrot is depicted putting on his characteristic white makeup, using a moonbeam as a paintbrush. In the terms that Baudelaire made famous in “The Painter of Everyday Life,” the dandy’s detachment, his vaunting of the cosmetic over nature, signifies an aristocracy of surfaces that belies his artistic inner torment.

Giraud’s poems are in the form of the rondel, a French lyric consisting of thirteen lines divided into three stanzas (two quatrains and a cinquain), each line consisting of eight syllables. Lines one and two are repeated as the seventh and eighth lines; line one is also repeated as line thirteen. This recycling of lines, rhymes, and rhythms permits thematic materials to be recombined in new semantic (and, for Schönberg, musical) arenas. For a composer with a lifelong interest in numerology and cabalistic mysticism, Schönberg found the complex ordering of repetitions, syllables, rhymes generative for his surgical interrogation of the tonal system. Even the Opus 21 numbering seems to have determined Schönberg’s selection of twenty-one of Giraud’s fifty poems.

Schönberg’s ordering of Giraud’s text does not compose a linear narrative but rather sketches a series of hallucinatory scenes loosely based on the title character, his worship of the Moon, his pursuit of Columbine and his battles with her father, the bourgeois Cassander (the fourth principal character of commedia dell’arte theater, Harlequin, does not appear). There is a mood of grotesque humor and oniric imagery that marks Pierrot’s expressionist surface. The dominant metaphor in the poems that Schönberg selected is the moon as source of poetic inspiration, but also sign of Pierrot’s solitude and abjection. Among modernists the celebration of the moon implied a direct rebuke to heroic, Apollonian creativity associated with the Sun. Against solar clarity and rationality, the moon represents unconscious, atavistic, and sexual forces that cannot be contained (another version of this cosmic agon was staged in Kruchenykh and Malevich’s 1913 futurist play, Victory over the Sun). In the eighth poem of Pierrot the moon’s conflict with the sun is figured through the hallucinatory image of giant black moths blotting out the sun’s rays. In a paradox that animates much early modernism, Schönberg’s expressionism challenges modernity's streamlined forms and sun-lit rationality by forging new futures built on a pre-capitalist, agrarian (and libidinal) past.

If Pierrot's narrative is fragmentary, its three sections provide an allegory of the poet's journey – from the ecstasy of Pierrot's communion with the moon, to the disordered nightmare of his confrontation with material and mortal sources of his inspiration, to a reconciliation with the past and a return to his native soil. In Part I, Pierrot becomes drunk on the moon's poetry (1), rhapsodizes on Columbine (2), puts on his trademark white makeup with a moonbeam (3), and observes the moon as a "pale laundress" washing "nighttime's bleached fabrics" (4). A Chopin waltz is morbidly compared to a drop of blood on the lips of a consumptive (5). The poet asks the Madonna to use his poetry as a new incarnation of her son's body (6). In the concluding section of Part I, the moon has withdrawn its inspiration and has become "sick," anticipating the theme of physical ruin and psychic despair in the second section (7). Part II becomes truly demonic, opening with a spectral passacaglia (8) in which giant black butterflies efface the sun. The poet offers a prayer to Pierrot, urging him to return laughter to him (9). During a night of debauchery, Pierrot, attempting to rob a coffin, is startled by "Red, baronial rubies" staring at him like the eyes of the dead (10). In Rote Messe ("Red Mass") Pierrot exposes his own heart as the host in a "horrible communion" (11), an image of self-immolation that continues in Galgenlied where the gallows is compared to a "skinny whore" (12). The final two sections of Part II (13 and 14) sustain the image of poetic sacraments, the once salvific moon now become a "naked scimitar" hanging over the poet's head. Part III marks a retrospective turn. Pierrot is homesick for Italy and the simpler pleasures of pantomime (15). He bores a hole in the head of the pompous buffoon, Cassander, and smokes Turkish tobacco through it like a pipe (16). In Parodie the moon mocks an aging duenna who sits waiting for Pierrot in the arbor while knitting with needles that imitate the moon's beams (17). In Der Mondfleck (The Moon Spot) Pierrot attempts to remove a white spot from his coat that he discovers has been produced by the moon (18). Serenade shows Pierrot playing his viola "Like a stork on one leg," and when Cassander complains about the noise Pierrot begins to bow on Cassander's bald head (19). Heimfahrt depicts Pierrot sailing home to his native Bergamo, using the moonbeam as a rudder (20); in the final segment, Pierrot expresses his longing for a "fairestaye age," the thought of which recalls old pleasures and turns his bitter mood to pleasant thoughts (21). The final poem suggests that although the poet has lost his way in nightmarish labyrinths, once he remembers his humble origins, he may be reconciled to time.

The wild imagery and grotesque humor of these sequences are embodied musically in a variety of contrapuntal and coloristic elements and by sudden changes of tempi, often within each individual segment. Each poem is scored for a different configuration of instruments, the density of tutti ensemble playing increasing in the last sections until the final poem when all instruments make an appearance. Flute and clarinet alternate with piccolo and bass clarinet, creating a rich set of timbres for each poem. The reciter's Sprechstimme occasionally imitates the instrumentation, following its pitches a half or whole step above or below, creating a discordant duet. Despite Schönberg's dismissal of programmatic elements in music, there is a fair amount of textual painting throughout, as in the end of Der Kranke Mond with its eery vibrato to imitate the "sick moon" or in Enthauptung 's agitated piano accompaniment to Pierrot's terror at the "naked scimitar" hanging over his head, or the cello imitating Pierrot's viola in Serenade. A particularly vivid use of tonal illustration comes at the beginning of Der Dandy with the soprano's rapid upward glissando on the phrase phantastischen Lichstrahl ("fantastic light beam") and the use of the piano in the high register to illustrate the "crystalline vials" containing Pierrot's cosmetics. For a work that defies conventional musical tonality, Pierrot is surprisingly replete with traditional forms. From the contrapuntal passacaglia of Die Nacht and the palindromic canon of Der Mondfleck to the waltz of Valse de Chopin and the Serenade, Schönberg builds musical references into the formal structure, even as he dismantles the edifice of Western tonality.

Finally, one must mention the extreme difficulty of playing demanded of the instrumentalists and vocalist. Not only is the music technically challenging, but these features are often hidden behind the vocalist's part or blurred by fast tempi with metronome markings that require playing at breakneck speed. The cello must play in its highest range, and in general all of the instruments must challenge their customary tonal and timbral contours. In some sections musicians must change instruments within a short interval. The sudden change of doubled instruments requires facility in several instruments, an especially difficult feat for the violinist who must exchange with the viola. The extreme demands on performance do not suggest opportunities for virtuosic display but, on the contrary, reinforce Pierrot 's thematics of psychic chaos and thwarted desire. Only in the last section, with Pierrot on his way home to Italy and the day dawning does the music, via a brief viola and cello duet, provide a transitory resolution and reflective calm.

Despite expressive musical rendering of Giraud's poems, Schönberg felt that music should not depend on the lyrics. Schubert, once again, seems to have provided his inspiration. In an article published in Der blaue Reiter in 1912, Schönberg confesses that

> A few years ago I was deeply ashamed when I discovered in several Schubert songs, well-known to me, that I had absolutely no idea what was going on in the poems on which they were based. But when I had read the poems it became clear to me that I had gained absolutely nothing for the understanding of the songs thereby, since the poems did not make it necessary for me to change my conception of the musical interpretation in the slightest degree. On the contrary, it appeared that, without knowing the poem, I had grasped the content, the real content, perhaps even more profoundly than if I had clung to the surface of the mere thoughts expressed in words. ("The Relationship to the Text")

At one level, one can imagine Schönberg thinking of the rippling piano obligato in Schubert's setting of Goethe's Gretchen am Spinnrad that imitates the spinning wheel, but in speaking of the "real content" of music he is thinking of something far more subliminal that music expresses and to which Pierrot points. He might as well have been thinking of Schubert's Quintet, which is valedictory without saying so.

Schubert composed his magisterial C major Quintet in the last year of his life, a year that saw the production of an astonishing body of work: the Schwanengesang songs, the last 3 piano sonatas (C minor, A and B-flat), completion of the "Great" Symphony in C, Der Hirt auf dem Felsen (The Shepherd on the Rock) for soprano, clarinet and piano, among other major works. And if we go back a couple of years, we could add to this production, the two piano Trios, the "Unfinished Symphony," and the G major Quartet (had Beethoven died at the same age as Schubert [31] he would have been primarily known for his first symphony and his first of sixteen quartets). Not only are these major works in the Romantic repertoire, their spaciousness and inventiveness anticipate the "big" works of the late 19th century, Mahler and Bruckner, and as I have indicated, the formal innovations of the modernists.

Although the Quintet is written in C major, one could be excused for thinking that it is in C minor, due to the constant fluctuation of tonalities from major to minor modes. The doubled cellos, often playing in unison in thirds or sixths, give a heft and solidity to the Quintet while the viola is exchanged equally among the lower and upper trios throughout. The sustained C major chord with which the Quintet opens suddenly builds to a diminished seventh, only to resolve back to C major, thus setting the stage for the larger work's oscillation of tonal centers. The same ambivalent opening appears in the opening to the G Major Quartet written two years earlier. This relatively simple cell is then thematically repeated throughout the movement, here with parallel chords, later with agitated arpeggios and finally with repeated triplets. After a twenty-six-measure bridge consisting of a turbulent upward modulation, the tonal center changes to E-flat in the movement's beautiful second theme. Played by twin cellos above the viola's bass line, the second subject challenges the more traditional sonata form, in which, instead of modulating to the anticipated dominant, G, Schubert changes direction to E-flat, a third above the tonic. Schubert's use of modulations by the interval of a third continues throughout the Quintet, thwarting traditional tonic-dominant expectations of the classical sonata form. The theme is then exchanged with one cello – and later viola – playing a pizzicato accompaniment to the melody. Adding to the complexity of the movement is a short transitional theme – almost a march – at the end of the exposition and based on parallel chords that knit the lyrical second theme with the more tempestuous first while exposing sonorities implicit in both. And indeed, the movement is dominated by contrasts between the two themes that are sustained over a considerable distance, lyrical passages vying with more vigorous counterpoint.

The Adagio is one of the most arresting slow movements in Romantic musical literature, akin in ways to the Arietta of Beethoven’s opus 111 sonata or the Cavatina to his opus 130 quartet. Like these works, this stately movement begins with a theme – more a series of pulsations – played by the first violin, accompanied by pizzicato in the second cello and a hovering, sustained series of chords in the second violin, first cello, and viola. This middle trio creates a hushed, shimmering backdrop to the conversation between plucked cello and violin. A sudden trill in the cellos upsets this mood of quiet reflection, in a turbulent passage dominated by the second cello playing a restless series of triplets. When the first theme returns, the cello, instead of being plucked, plays its accompaniment as an unsettled, wandering undercurrent to the violin. The contrast between reflection and restlessness is resolved somewhat in the movement’s last bars with a turn to the Neapolitan minor key, along with a brief restatement of the trill that announced the change from slow to fast movement.

The forceful Scherzo that follows is as raucous as the Adagio is slow and reflective, although both contain middle sections that contrast drastically in character. The contrasting sections in both movements begin a half-step higher than the ending of the primary section, and each makes important use of a figure with trills. The buoyant first subject of the Scherzo is reinforced by the doubled cellos that generate what one critic calls a “stamping exuberance” to the dance that is then contradicted by the Andante section in the Trio that follows. As in the Adagio movement, this second portion seems to turn inward, the theme based on a series of descending phrases in the cellos and viola. Schubert chooses the Neapolitan key of D-flat major in contrast to the Scherzo’s C major, as though, in John Reeds terms, “questioning, with a kind of wistful tenderness, the very essence of the tonal system on which his own work, and that of his great predecessors and contemporaries, had been based” (Schubert: The Final Years).

The finale – another dance – is a joyous romp, looking back to Schubert’s earlier music and perhaps that Vienna from which he was soon to depart. If the movement looks historically backwards, it also looks back structurally to the first movement, mimicking the second subject in the cello duet above a viola base. Yet the viola is as much a part of the upper trio as it supports the bass line, and one of the joys of this Finale is the way that the two trios exchange voices in an antiphonal exchange. Virtuosoic playing by the first violin throughout this movement, and the quickened Presto ending create an exciting, breathless conclusion. And although the Quintet ends on a heroic return to C major, its final D-flat grace note before the triumphal last note hints at the larger work’s darker profundities.

Thomas Mann famously said that he wanted the C major Quintet played on his death bed. Critics over the years have seen this work as Schubert’s memento mori for his own immanent death. Especially in the Adagio movement, one feels a degree of introspection and serenity that, as in Beethoven’s last piano sonatas and quartets, inspires a sense of resolution and calm. This is not a work of Viennese Gemütlichkeit, its sheer length and technical demands challenging not only the classical sonata form but the bourgeois expectations of his 19th-century listeners. The Quintet as a whole never settles down but retains its restless searching among keys and rhythmic variation until its robust dance in the last movement. If the Quintet is Schubert’s retrospective account of his career it is also, as Adorno observes in my epigraph, a promise of happiness yet to be achieved.

Michael Davidson is Distinguished Professor of Literature at the University of California, San Diego. He is the author of The San Francisco Renaissance: Poetics and Community at Mid-Century (Cambridge, 1989), Ghostlier Demarcations: Modern Poetry and the Material Word (University of California, 1997), and Guys Like Us: Citing Masculinity in Cold War Poetics (University of Chicago, 2003). His most recent book is Concerto for the Left Hand: Disability and the Defamiliar Body (University of Michigan, 2008). Davidson is the editor of The New Collected Poems of George Oppen (New Directions, 2002), and the author of eight books of poetry, the most recent of which is The Arcades (O Books, 1998). With Lyn Hejinian, Barrett Watten, and Ron Silliman, he is the co-author of Leningrad (Mercury House Press, 1991).
1. Moondrunken
The wine that only eyes may drink
Pours from the moon in waves at nightfall
And like a springflood overwhelms
The still horizon rim.

Gelüste schauerlich und süß,
Durchschwimmen ohne Zahl die Fluten!
Den Wein, den man mit Augen trinkt,
Gießt Nachts der Mond in Wogen nieder.

Desires, shivering and sweet,
Are swimming without number through the flood waters!
The wine that only eyes may drink
Pours from the moon in waves at nightfall.

Der Dichter, den die Andacht treibt,
Berauscht sich an dem heiligen Tranke,
Den Himmel wendet er verzückt
Das Haupt und taumelnd saugt und schlürft er
Den Wein, den man mit Augen trinkt.

The poet, by his ardor driven,
Grown drunken with the holy drink—
To heaven he rapturously lifts
His head and reeling slips and swallows
The wine that only eyes may drink.

2. Colombine
The moonlight's palest blossoms,
The whitest wonder-roses,
Bloom in summer nightfall.
O might I break just one!

Des Mondlichts bleiche Blüten,
Die weißen Wunderrosen,
Blühn in den Julinächten -
O bräch ich eine nur!

My anxious pain to soften
I seek by darkest waters—
The moonlight's palest blossoms,
The whitest wonder-roses.

Mein banges Leid zu lindern,
Such ich am dunklen Strome
Des Mondlichts bleiche Blüten,
Die weißen Wunderrosen.

Fulfilled would be my yearning
Might I, as one enchanted,
As one in sleep, unpetal
Upon your auburn tresses
The moonlight's palest blossoms.

Gestillt war all mein Sehnen,
Dürft ich so märchenheimlich,
So selig leis - entblättern
Auf deine braunen Haare
Des Mondlichts bleiche Blüten!

Fulfilled would be my yearning
Might I, as one enchanted,
As one in sleep, unpetal
Upon your auburn tresses
The moonlight's palest blossoms.

3. Der Dandy
With lightbeams so weird and fantastic
The luminous moon lights the glistening jars
On the ebon, high-holiest washtub stand
Of the taciturn dandy from Bergamo.

In tönender, bronzer Schale
Lacht hell die Fontäne, metallicen Klang.
Mit einem phantastischen Lichtstrahl
Erleuchtet der Mond die krystallinen Flakons.

Resounding in bronze-tinted basin
Brightly laughs the fountain with metallic ring.
With lightbeams so weird and fantastic
The luminous moon lights the glistening jars.
Pierrot mit dem wächsernen Antlitz
Steht sinnend und denkt: wie er heute sich schminkt?
Fort schiebt er das Rot und das Orients Grün
Und bemalt sein Gesicht in erhabenem Stil
Mit einem phantastischen Mondstrahl.

4. Eine blasse Wäscherin
Eine blasse Wäscherin
Wäscht zur Nachtzeit bleiche Tücher;
Nackte, silberweiße Arme
Streckt sie nieder in die Flut.

Durch die Lichtung schleichen Winde,
Leis bewegen sie den Strom.
Eine blasse Wäscherin
Wäscht zur Nachtzeit bleiche Tücher.

Und die sanfte Magd des Himmels,
Von den Zweigen zart umschmeichelt,
Breitet auf die dunklen Wiesen
Ihre lichtgewobnen Linnen -
Eine blasse Wäscherin.

5. Valse de Chopin
Wie ein blasser Tropfen Bluts
Färbt die Lippen einer Kranken
Also ruht auf diesen Tönen
Ein vernichtungssüchtiger Reiz.

Wildes Lust Akkorde stören
Der Verzweiflung eigenen Traum
Wie ein blasser Tropfen Bluts
Färbt die Lippen einer Kranken

Heiß und jauchzend, süß und schmachtend,
Melancholisch düst rer Walzer,
Kommst mir nimmer aus den Sinnen!
Haftest mir an den Gedanken,
Wie ein blasser Tropfen Bluts!

6. Madonna
Steig, o Mutter aller Schmerzen,
Auf den Altar meiner Verse!
Blut aus deinen magren Brusten
Hat des Schwertes Wut vergossen.

Pierrot, with waxen complexion,
Stands musing, and thinks: How shall I today make up?
He shoves aside rouge and the Oriental green,
And he daubs his face in most dignified style
With moonbeams so weird and fantastic.

4. A Pale Washerwoman
A pale washerwoman
Washes nightly pallid kerchiefs,
Naked, silverwhitest arms
Reaching downward to the waters.

Through the clearing steal the breezes
Gently stirring up the stream.
A pale washerwoman
Washes nightly pallid kerchiefs.

And the gentle Maid of Heaven,
By the branches softly fondled,
Spreads out on the darkling meadows
All her light-bewoven linen—
A pale washerwoman.

5. Chopin Waltz
As a faint red drop of blood
Stains the pale lips of one stricken,
So there sleeps within those tones
A morbid, soul-infecting lure.

Chords of savage lust disrupt
The icy dream of bleak despair—
As a faint red drop of blood
Stains the pale lips of one stricken.

Warm and joyous, sweet and yearning,
Melancholy-somber waltzes
Haunt me ever through my senses,
Cling in my imagination
As a faint red drop of blood.

6. Madonna
Rise, O Mother of All Sorrows,
On the altar of my verses!
Blood from your poor, shrunk en breasts
By the sword’s cold rage was spilled.
Deine ewig frischen Wunden
Gleichen Augen, rot und offen.
Steig, o Mutter aller Schmerzen,
Auf den Altar meiner Verse!

In den abgezehrten Händen
Hältst du deines Sohnes Leiche.
Ihn zu zeigen aller Menschheit -
Doch der Blick der Menschen meidet
Dich, o Mutter aller Schmerzen!

7. Der kranke Mond
Du nächtig todeskranker Mond
Dort auf des Himmels schwarzem Pfühl,
Dein Blick, so fiebernd übergroß,
Bannt mich wie fremde Melodie.

An unstillbarem Liebesleid
Stirbst du, an Sehnsucht, tief erstickt,
Du nächtig todeskranker Mond
Dort auf des Himmels schwarzem Pfühl.

Den Liebsten, der im Sinnenrausch
Gedankenlos zur Liebsten geht,
Belustigt deiner Strahlen Spiel -
Dein bleiches, qualgebornes Blut,
Du nächtig todeskranker Mond.

8. Nacht
Finstre, schwarze Riesenfalke
Töteten der Sonne Glanz.
Ein geschlossnes Zauberbuch,
Ruht der Horizont - verschwiegen.

Aus dem Qualm verlorner Tiefen
Steigt ein Duft, Erinnerung mordend!
Finstre, schwarze Reisenfalte
Töteten der Sonne Glanz.

Und vom Himmel erdenwärts
Senken sich mit schweren Schwirgen
Unsichtbar die Ungetome
Auf die Menschenherzen nieder...
Finstre, schwarze Riesenfalte.

Your deep wounds forever open
Seem like eyes, so red and staring.
Rise, O Mother of All Sorrows,
On the altar of my verses.

In your thin and wasted arms
You hold up your Son's broken body
To reveal it to all mankind—
Yet the eyes of men avoid your grief,
O Mother of All Sorrows.

7. The Sick Moon
You somber, deathly-stricken moon,
There on the heaven's darkest couch,
Your gaze, so feverishly swollen,
Charms me like a strange enchanted air.

Of insatiable love-pangs,
You die, die, by yearning overwhelmed,
You somber, deathly-stricken moon,
There on the heaven's darkest couch.

The lover who, with rapturous heart,
Without a care to his mistress goes
Is happy in your play of light,
In your pale and tormented blood,
You somber, deathly-stricken moon.

8. Night
Somber, shadowy, giant mothwings
Killed the splendid shine of sun.
An unopened magic-book,
The dark horizon lies—in silence.

The dank fumes of lower darkness
Give off vapor—stifling memory!
Somber, shadowy, giant mothwings
Killed the splendid shine of sun.

And from heaven down to earth
Sink, with heavy, swinging motion
Monsters huge, an unseen terror
On all mankind's hearts now falling—
Somber, shadowy, giant mothwings.
9. Gebet an Pierrot
Pierrot! Mein Lachen
Hab ich verlernt!
Das Bild des Glänzes
Zerflossen - Zerflossen!

Schwarz weht die Flagge
Mir nun vom Maste,
Pierrot! Mein Lachen
Hab ich verlernt!

O gib mir wieder,
Rossärzt der Seele,
Schneemann der Lyrik,
Durchlaucht vom Monde,
Pierrot - mein Lachen!

10. Raub
Rote, fürstliche Rubine,
Blutige Tropfen alten Ruhmes,
Schlummer in den Totenschreinen,
Drunten in den Grabgewolben.

Nachts, mit seinen Zechkumpanen,
Steigt Pierrot hinab - zu rauben
Rote, fürstliche Rubine,
Blutige Tropfen alten Ruhmes.

Doch da - straube sich die Haare,
Bleiche Furcht bannt sie am Platze:
Durch die Finsternis - wie Augen!
Stieren aus den Totenschreinen
Rote, fürstliche Rubine.

11. Rote Messe
Zu grauem Abendmahl,
Beim Blendedglanz des Goldes,
Beim Flackerschein der Kerzen,
Naht dem Altar - Pierrot!

Die Hand, die gottgeweihte,
Zerreißt die Priesterkleider
Zu grauem Abendmahl,
Beim Blendedglanz des Goldes

9. Prayer to Pierrot
Pierrot! My laughter
I have forgot!
The image of splendor
Dissolved, dissolved.

Black waves my banner
Now from my mast.
Pierrot! My laughter
I have forgot!

O give me once more,
Horse-doctor of souls,
Snowman of lyrics,
Moon's maharajah,
Pierrot — my laughter!

10. Theft
Princely, luminous red rubies,
Bloody drops of ancient glory,
Slumber in the dead men's coffins
Below, in the catacombs.

Nights, with his boon companions,
Pierrot creeps down to plunder
Princely, luminous red rubies,
Bloody drops of ancient glory.

But look — their hair stands straight up,
Pale with fright they stand rooted;
Through the fearsome gloom —like eyeballs
Staring from the dead men's coffins,
Princely, luminous red rubies.

11. Red Mass
For evil's dread communion
In blinding golden glitter,
In candleshine-and-shudder,
Mounts the altar — Pierrot!

His hand, the consecrated,
Tears off the priestly vestments
For evil's dread communion
In blinding glitter.
Mit segnender Geberde
Zeigt er den bangen Seelen
Die triefend rote Hostie:
Sein Herz - in blutgen Fingern -
Zu grasem Abendmahle!

12. Galgenlied
Die dürre Dirne
Mit langem Halse
Wird seine letzte
Geliebte sein.

In seinem Hirne
Steckt wie ein Nagel
Die dürre Dirne
Mit langem Halse.

Schlank wie die Pinie,
Am Hals ein Zöpfchen -
Wollüstig wird sie
Den Schelm umhalsen,
Die dürre Dirne!

13. Enthauptung
Der Mond, ein blankes Türkenschwert
Auf einem schwarzen Seidenkissen,
Gespenstisch groß - dräut er hinab
Durch schmerzensdunkle Nacht.

Pierrot irrt ohne Rast umher
Und starrt empor in Todesängsten
Zum Mond, dem blanken Türkenschwert
Auf einem schwarzen Seidenkissen.

Es schlottern unter ihm die Knie,
Ohnmächtig bricht er jäh zusammen.
Er wähnt: es sause strafend schon
Auf seinen Sünderhals hernieder
Der Mond, das blanke Türkenschwert.

14. Die Kreuze
Heilge Kreuze sind die Verse,
Dran die Dichter stumm verbluten,
Blindgeschlagen von der Geier
Flatterndem Gespensterschwarze!

With sign-of-cross and blessing gestures
He shows to trembling, trembling souls
The Host all red and dripping:
His heart—in bloody fingers—
For evil’s dread communion.

12. Gallows Song
The haggard harlot
With scrawny neck
Will be the last
Of his mistresses.

In his brain there
Sticks like a sharp nail
The haggard harlot
With scrawny neck.

Thin as a pine tree,
With hanging pigtail,
Lustily she will
Embrace the rascal,
The haggard harlot!

13. Beheading
The moon, glistening scimitar
Set on a black and silken cushion,
Unearthly huge, it threatens downward
Through sorrow-stricken night.

Pierrot wanders so restlessly,
Lifts up his eyes in deathly fright
To the moon, a glistening scimitar
Set on a black and silken cushion.

His knees are shaking with fright,
Fainting, he suddenly collapses.
He thinks that on his sinful neck
Comes whistling down with brutal force
The moon, the glistening scimitar.

14. The crosses
Holy crosses are the verses
On which poets, mute, are bleeding,
Blindly beaten by the vultures,
Fluttering swarms of ghostly phantoms.
In den Leibern schwelgten Schwerter,
Prunken in des Blutes Scharlach!
Heilge Kreuze sind die Verse,
Dran die Dichter stumm verblutten.

Tot das Haupt - erstarrt die Locken -
Fern, verweht der Lärm des Pöbels.
Langsam sinkt die Sonne nieder,
Eine rote Königskrone. -
Heilge Kreuze sind die Verse!

15. Heimweh
Lieblich klagend - ein krystallines Seufzen
Aus Italiens alter Pantomime,
Klingts herüber: wie Pierrot so hölzern,
So modern sentimental geworden

Und es tönt durch seines Herzens Wüste,
Tönt gedämpft durch alle Sinne wieder,
Lieblich klagend - ein krystallines Seufzen
Aus Italiens alter Pantomime.

Da vergißt Pierrot die Trauermienen!
Durch den bleichen Feuerschein des Mondes,
Durch des Lichtmeers Fluten - schweißt die Sehnsucht
Kühn hinauf, empor zum Heimathimmel
Lieblich klagend - ein krystallines Seufzen!

16. Gemeinheit
In den blanken Kopf Cassanders,
Dessen Schrein die Luft durchzetzert,
Bohrt Pierrot mit Heuchlermienen,
Zärtlich - einen Schädelbohrer!

Darauf stopft er mit dem Daumen
Seinen echten türkschen Taback
In den blanken Kopf Cassanders,
Dessen Schrein die Luft durchzetzert!

Dann dreht er ein Rohr von Weichsel
Hinten in die glatte Glatze
Und behäbig schmaucht und pafft er
Seinen echten türkschen Taback
Aus dem blanken Kopf Cassanders!

In their bodies daggers revelled,
Blazoned in the blood of scarlet!
Holy crosses are the verses
On which poets, mute, are bleeding.

Reft of life—the locks rigid—
Lo, the rabble's noise is fading.
Slowly sinks the sun in glory,
Like a crimson Emperor's crown.
Holy crosses are the verses.

15. Homesickness
Sweetly plaintive—a crystal sighing
From the old Italian pantomime
Rings across time: how Pierrot's grown awkward
In such sentimental modern fashion!

And it sounds through the wastes of his heart
Echoes softly through his senses also,
Sweetly plaintive—a crystal sighing
From the old Italian pantomime.

Now Pierrot forgets his somber mien.
Through the silvery fireglow of moonlight
Through the flooding waves of light, his yearning
Soars on high to native skies so distant—
Sweetly plaintive—a crystal sighing.

16. Vulgarity
Into the bald pate of Cassander,
Who rends the air with screaming,
Blithe Pierrot, affecting airs so kind
And tender—bores with a skull drill!

Then he plugs with his bug thumb
His own genuine Turkish tobacco
Into the blad pate of Cassander,
Who rends the air with screaming.

Then screwing his cherry pipestem
Deep into the polished baldpate,
Quite at ease he puffs and draws
His own genuine Turkish tobacco
Out of the bald pate of Cassander!
17. Parodie
Stricknadeln, blank und blinkend,
In ihrem grauen Haar,
Sitzt die Duenna murmelnd,
Im roten Röckchen da.

Sie wartet in der Laube,
Sie liebt Pierrot mit Schmerzen,
Stricknadeln, blank und blinkend,
In ihrem grauen Haar.

Da plötzlich - horch! - ein Wispern!
Ein Windhauch kichert leise:
Der Mond, der böse Spötter,
Äfft nach mit seinen Strahlen -
Stricknadeln, blink und blank.

18. Der Mondfleck
Einen weißen Fleck des hellen Mondes
Auf dem Rücken seines schwarzen Rockes,
So spaziert Pierrot im lauen Abend,
Aufzusuchen Glück und Abenteuer.

Plötzlich stört ihn was an seinem Anzug.
Er beschaut sich rings und findet richtig -
Einen weißen Fleck des hellen Mondes
Auf dem Rücken seines schwarzen Rockes.

Warte! denkt er: das ist so ein Gipsfleck!
Wisch und wischt, doch - bringt ihn nicht herunter!
Und so geht er, giftgeschwollen, weiter,
Reibt und reibt bis an den frühen Morgen -
Einen weißen Fleck des hellen Mondes.

19. Serenade
Mit groteskem Riesenbogen
Kratzt Pierrot auf seiner Bratsche,
Wie der Storch auf einem Beine,
Knipst er trüb ein Pizzicato.

Plötzlich naht Cassander - wütend
Ob des nächsten Virtuosen -
Mit groteskem Riesenbogen
Kratzt Pierrot auf seiner Bratsche.

17. Parody
Steel needles, twinkling brightly,
Stuck in her graying hair,
Sits the duenna, murmuring,
In her knee-length scarlet skirt.

She's waiting in the arbor,
She loves Pierrot with aching heart—
Steel needles, twinkling brightly,
Stuck in her graying hair.

But suddenly—hark—a whisper!
A windpuff titters softly;
The moon, the cruel mocker,
Is aping with its bright rays
Steel needles' wink and blink.

18. The Moonspot
With a spot of white, of shining moonlight,
On the collar of his jet-black jacket,
So Pierrot goes walking in the evening,
Out to seek some joy and high adventure.

Suddenly, in his dress something disturbs him.
He examines it—and yes, he finds there
A spot of white, of shining moonlight,
On the collar of his jet-black jacket.

Hang it, he thinks; another spot of whitewash
Whisks and whisks, yet he cannot remove it.
So he goes on, full of spleen and fury,
Rubs and rubs until the early morning
A spot of white, of shining moonlight.

19. Serenade
With a bow grotesque and monstrous,
Pierrot scrapes away at his viola;
Like a stork on only one leg,
Sadly plucks a pizzicato.

Pop, out comes Cassander,
Raging at the nightly virtuoso—
With a bow grotesque and monstrous,
Pierrot scrapes away at his viola.
Von sich wirft er jetzt die Bratsche:
Mit der delikaten Linken
Faßt den Kahlkopf er am Kragen -
Träumend spielt er auf der Glatze
Mit groteskem Riesenbogen.

Now he throws down his viola:
With his delicate left hand
He grabs the baldpate by the collar—
Dreamily plays upon his tonsure
With a bow grotesque and monstrous.

20. Heimfahrt
Der Mondstrahl ist das Ruder,
Seerose dient als Boot;
Drauf fährt Pierrot gen Süden
Mit gutem Reisewind.

Der Strom summmt tiefe Skalen
Und wiegt den leichten Kahn.
Der Mondstrahl ist das Ruder,
Seerose dient als Boot.

The stream hums deep cadenzas
And rocks the little skiff;
A moonbeam for the rudder,
Water lily for a boat.

Nach Bergamo, zur Heimat,
Kehrt nun Pierrot zurück;
Schwach dämmert schon im Osten
Der grüne Horizont.
- Der Mondstrahl ist das Ruder.

To Bergamo, the homeland,
Now Pierrot returns;
Faint glows the green horizon
With dawning in the east—
- A moonbeam for the rudder.

21. O alter Duft
O alter Duft aus Märchenzeit,
Berauschest wieder meine Sinne;
Ein närrisch Heer von Schelmerein
Durchschwirrt die leichte Luft.

O fragrance old from days of yore
Once more you intoxicate my senses.
A prankish troop of rogurities
Is swirling through buoyant air.

Ein glückhaft Wünschen macht mich froh
Nach Freuden, die ich lang verachtet:
O alter Duft aus Märchenzeit,
Berauschest wieder mich!

A cheerful longing makes me hope
For joys which I had long despised;
O fragrance old from days of yore,
Once more you intoxicate me.

All meinen Unmut geb ich preis;
Aus meinem sonnunrahmten Fenster
Beschau ich frei die liebe Welt
Und träum hinaus in selge Weiten...
O alter Duft - aus Märchenzeit!

I have abandoned all my gloom
And from my window framed in sunlight
I freely gaze on the dear world
And dream beyond in boundless transport—
O fragrance old—from days of yore.

Translation by Ingolf Dahl and Carl Beier
Soprano Susan Narucki's career reflects a passion for discovery and wide-ranging interests. Recognized as one of today's leading interpreters of contemporary music, she has enjoyed close collaborations with numerous composers, presenting over one hundred world premieres in opera, concert and recording during the past twenty years. Her engagements during the 2007-8 season included Elliott Carter's Tempo e Tempi with James Levine and MET Chamber Ensemble at Carnegie Hall, Stravinsky's Les Noces (in a new orchestration by Steven Stucky) with Esa-Pekka Salonen and the Los Angeles Philharmonic, Gerard Grisey's L'icône paradoxaile at IRCAM's Festival Agora with the Orchestra of Radio France at the Cité de la Musique in Paris and Liza Lim's Mother Tongue with the ELISION Ensemble at the Maerzmusik Festival in Berlin. Her portrayal of the role of "Mama" in Elliott Carter's opera What Next? (directed by Christopher Alden) was praised by the New York Times as "compelling and luminous". Susan Narucki earned both Grammy and Cannes awards for her recordings of the works of George Crumb and a 2002 Grammy nomination in the Best Classical Vocal Performance for Elliott Carter's Tempo e Tempi, all on Bridge Records. Ms. Narucki's forthcoming CDs include The Light that Is Felt: Songs of Charles Ives, with pianist Donald Berman, for New World Records. Susan Narucki joined the faculty of the University of California at San Diego in Fall of 2008 as Professor of Voice.

Winner of a 2003 Avery Fisher Career Grant, flutist Demarre McGill has performed concerti with the Chicago Symphony, Philadelphia Orchestra, the San Diego Symphony, The Florida Orchestra, Milwaukee Symphony, and the Baltimore Symphony. Currently Principal Flutist of the San Diego Symphony, Mr. McGill has held the same position with The Florida Orchestra and the Santa Fe Opera Orchestra, along with an acting principal position with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra. He is also the co-founder and Artistic Director of Art of Elan, San Diego’s newest chamber music organization, and he teaches privately in the San Diego area. Mr. McGill received his Bachelor’s Degree in Flute Performance from The Curtis Institute of Music, where he studied with Julius Baker and Jeffrey Khaner. He continued his studies with Mr. Baker at The Juilliard School, where he received a Master of Music degree.

Anthony Burr received his D.M.A. in Contemporary Music Performance from UCSD in 2004. He is known internationally as one of the leading interpreters of contemporary music for clarinet, having performed as soloist for many leading institutions including the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center, The Ensemble Sospeso (New York), The Munich Biennale, and Elision (Australia). He has collaborated with many leading artists including Laurie Anderson, Alvin Lucier, and MacArthur Fellow John Zorn, and has created a series of live film/music performances with experimental filmmaker Jennifer Reeves. As a composer, he has specialized in the creation of epic scale mixed media pieces, most notably Biosphoria: An Environmental Opera.

Violinist Jeff Thayer is Concertmaster of the San Diego Symphony as well as Concertmaster and guest artist of the Music Academy of the West (Santa Barbara). Previous positions include Assistant Concertmaster of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra, Associate Concertmaster of the North Carolina Symphony, and Concertmaster of the Canton (OH) Symphony Orchestra. He is a graduate of the Cleveland Institute of Music, the Eastman School of Music, and The Juilliard School's Pre-College Division. His teachers include William Preucil, Donald Weilerstein, Zvi Zeitlin, and Dorothy DeLay. A native of Williamsport, Pennsylvania, Mr. Thayer began violin lessons with his mother at the age of three. At fourteen, he went to study with Jose Antonio Campos at the Conservatorio Superior in Córdoba, Spain. He has appeared as soloist with the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra, the San Diego Symphony, the Jupiter Symphony, the North Carolina Symphony, the Canton Symphony Orchestra, the Pierre Monteux School Festival Orchestra, the Spartanburg Philharmonic, the Cleveland Institute of Music Symphony Orchestra, The Music Academy of the West Festival Orchestra, the Williamsport Symphony Orchestra, the Nittany Valley Symphony Orchestra, and the Conservatory Orchestra of Córdoba, among others. Other festivals include La Jolla Summerfest, the Mainly Mozart Festival (San Diego), Festival der Zukunft, and the Tibor Varga Festival (Switzerland). Through a generous loan from Irwin and Joan Jacobs, Mr. Thayer plays on the 1708 “Sir Bagshawe” Stradivarius.

Violinist Alexander Palamidis earned a Master of Music in Violin Performance from the University of Southern California where he was a member of the USC String Quartet. He attended classes with an emphasis on Chamber Music and Violin Performance at The Mozarteum Academy of Music in Salzburg, Austria. A graduate of Istanbul Conservatory of Music, he also holds a degree in Mechanical Engineering. He has been a member and soloist with many orchestras including Istanbul State Symphony, Denver Symphony, Austin Symphony, Austin Lyric Opera, Denver Chamber Orchestra, leader and conductor of the Istanbul Philharmonic Chamber Orchestra, Concertmaster with the Istanbul Radio String Orchestra, Glendale Chamber Orchestra, and Acting Concertmaster with the San Diego Symphony Orchestra and the San Diego Opera. He performed and toured with the L’Amoroso String Quartet. He is currently Principal Second Violinist with the San Diego Symphony Orchestra and Concertmaster of the San Diego Chamber Orchestra. Special interests include the study of ancient Indian scriptures and philosophy, old violins, movies, and travel.

Described by The Strad magazine as a musician whose “tonal distinction and essential musicality produced an auspicious impression,” Taiwanese violist Che-Yen Chen has performed throughout the U.S. and abroad in venues such as Alice Tully Hall, Merkin Hall, Weill Recital Hall, Carnegie Hall, Metropolitan Museum of Art, Jordon Hall, Library of Congress in D.C., Kimmel Center, Taiwan National Concert Hall, Wigmore Hall, and Snape Malting Concert Hall. A founding member of the Formosa Quartet, the Amadeus prize winner of the 10th London International String Quartet Competition, Mr. Chen is an advocate of chamber music. A participant at the Ravinia Festival, Mr. Chen was featured in the festival’s Rising Star series and the Musicians from Ravinia tour. Other festival appearances include the Kingston Chamber Music Festival, International Viola Congress, Mainly Mozart, Chamber Music International, La Jolla Summerfest, Primrose Festival, Bath International Music Festival, Aldeburgh Festival, Seattle Chamber Music Society Summer Festival, Taiwan Connection, Incontri in Terra di Siena, Emilia Romagna Festival, and numerous others. Mr. Chen studied at The Curtis Institute of Music and The Juilliard School under the guidance of Michael Tree, Joseph de Pasquale, and Paul Neubauer. Mr. Chen is currently teaching at San Diego State University, UC San Diego, McGill University in Montreal, and holds the Principal Viola position of the San Diego Symphony.

Charles Curtis has been a professor in the Music Department of the University of California, San Diego, since Fall 2000. Previously he was Principal Cello of the Symphony Orchestra of the North German Radio in Hamburg, a faculty member at Princeton, the cellist of the Ridge String Quartet, and a sought-after chamber musician and soloist in the classical repertoire. He holds the Piatigorsky Prize of the New York Cello Society, and received prizes in the Naumburg, Geneva and Cassado international competitions. He has appeared as soloist with the San Francisco Symphony, the National Symphony, the Baltimore Symphony, the Symphony Orchestra of Berlin, the NDR Symphony, the Orchestre de la Suisse Romande, the Orquestra de la Maggio Musicale in Florence, the Janacek Philharmonic, as well as orchestras in Brazil and Chile. His chamber music associations have taken him to the Marlboro, Ravinia, Wolf Trap, La Jolla Summerfest and Victoria Festivals, among many others. He has recorded and performed widely with soprano Kathleen Battle and harpsichordist Anthony Newman, as well as with jazz legends Herbie Hancock, Wayne Shorter and Brad Mehldau. Curtis performs a unique repertoire of major solo works created. expressly for him by La Monte Young, Alvin Lucier, Élaine Radigue and Alison Knowles, rarely-heard compositions by Terry Jennings and Richard Maxfield, and works by Cardew, Wolff, Feldman and Cage. His solo performances this past year have taken him to the Angelica Festival in Bologna, the Guggenheim in New York, the CAPC in Bordeaux, the Galerie Renos Xippas in Paris, the MaerzMusik Festival in Berlin, Dundee Contemporary Arts, as well as Chicago, Austin, Hamburg and Ferrara.

Yao Zhao is the Cello Principal of the San Diego Symphony Orchestra, and was Associate Cello Principal from 2005 to 2007. Born in Beijing in 1976, Zhao made his first appearance in concert at the age of five, and solo debut in the Beijng Concert Hall at age nine. That same year, he was also accepted to the China Central Conservatory of Music. For exceptional performance in a master class held by Professor Eleonore Schoenfeld, Mr. Zhao was chosen to continue his education on full scholarships at the Idyllwild Arts Academy and the Thornton School of Music at the University of Southern California. Since winning a top prize at the First Chinese National Cello Competition in 1987, Mr. Zhao has kept a winning streak of thirteen competitions, awards and honors. The successful solo debut at Weill Recital Hall of Carnegie Hall in New York has been marked as one of his career highlights. Mr. Zhao has performed at renowned concert halls in more than forty cities around the world. Some of his festival appearances have included the Grand Teton Festival, the Ojai Music Festival, and the Asia Philharmonic Orchestra in Korea and Japan which gathers top Asian artists worldwide. Mr. Zhao has been interviewed by CNN, CBS, KTLA, GreekTV, and CCTV. Beyond a busy performance schedule, Mr. Zhao continues to dedicate himself to the education of youth in the arts. This year marks his 9th season teaching at the Idyllwild Arts Academy and the Idyllwild Arts Summer Festival.