For three days Bradley Rosen will present BREATHER:RESIST, an elaborative sound installation work that includes a spatialized score for four female voices, which will be diffused over a surround-sound system in a light and temperature controlled gallery space. At the core of the experience lies how we listen to music, how we listen to text that at times is clearly comprehensible and poetic, and lastly, how we listen to disembodied voices emanating from carefully placed speakers opposite our own “centered” body.

Very special thanks to Jessica Flores, Antonio Estrada, Katharina Rosenberger, James Campbell, Aldrin Payopay, David Lopez de Arenosa, Tyler Grady and the entire UCSD design, building, and lighting crew, for without I would have been lost.
